

The History

In the 1800's the building was a Victorian Bath House and people would travel from far and wide to bathe in the sea water pumped from the unique and iconic Rhenish Tower by the harbour in Lynmouth. It was believed that the salt baths would promote good health and, with growing popularity, The Bath House developed to become The Bath Hotel.

The hotel was purchased by the current proprietors' grandparents in 1951, the year before the flood that devastated Lynmouth.

The hotel has now been in the same family for 72 years with the third generation of the family proudly carrying on in the footsteps of Mr & Mrs Braunton.

We are also proudly one of the last remaining free houses in the village.
